

Mr. Pryce Kojo Thompson.

Board Chairman

He retired (at age 52) from SSB Bank in 2003 after 15 years at the bank's helm of affairs. During his tenure as Chief Executive he had anchored the management team which restructured the then Social Security Bank from its distressed state in the 1980s through its turnaround into a viable, attractive institution. This enabled the bank to be subsequently listed on the stock exchange and privatized to a majority foreign-owned entity in the late 1990s. Along the way, he successfully accomplished the then only merger of banks ever done in Ghana.

Prior to his stint at the bank, he had held the position of Managing Director of Achimota Brewery Company for about a year and a half. Before that, he worked as a Management Consultant in both private and public consultancy establishments.

His academic background covers studies in Economics as well as Business Administration, with studies in Ghana, Japan and Britain. These culminated in an MBA from the University of Bradford, UK. A firm believer in training the human resource of the establishments he headed. He used to attend annual seminars and workshops in many countries during his active days in executive management.

He has spent his retirement pursuing his avid interest in the internet. He has also continued to pursue his interest in corporate governance with chairing the boards of Ghana Commercial Bank (2009-2011) and Provident Insurance Company (since 2008) and membership on the board of Teachers' Fund Financial Services Ltd (since 2008). His board experience encompasses many varied companies, pre-retirement.

He tries to keep in physical shape by playing squash racquets, a game he learnt during his student days in the Achimota Secondary School (1962-1968)
